If you are a knowledge-seeker who loves to find out about design concepts and photos of technology, then you will love the iPad. With iPads you can take notes, surf the web, and edit photos (of course). I can't count how many times I see a girl show me her artistic iPad images for my review. But what I didn't know was that there were people out there that created art on their iPads. I am here to tell you of I was very impressed by the quality of iPad artwork I have seen. Absolutely beautiful! iPad is too. I am not sure how many designers, illustrators, and graphic artists use their iPads as their primary tool, but I am positive that many do. I have seen so many creative iPad images floating around on Facebook, simply by looking through some iPad diehards' albums. There are artists out there that use the iPad as a canvas, and I am happy to see that. Creating great artwork on iPad is a simple process. iPads were never intended to be a graphic design laptop replacement. They are built with a specific purpose. However, if you can use them that way, you can still do some excellent work. The tools that are available with iPads are simply too powerful to consider anything else. For example, you can take notes, browse the web, and easily edit photos in your new Apple Pencil. However, if you are not an artist, the iPad falls short. Graphics and design software are simply not optimized for iPad. Yet. I recently finished, and loved, the new iPad Pro. I did not realise it is a multi-purpose device. The screen is just too darn gorgeous. I also realise that my new Apple Pencil is still not bright enough to really use the new Pro, but I get by.
