A number of people have asked about the difference between Smart Objects and layers. Smart Objects are special layers that are saved as separate files. We have investigated a number of alternatives to Smart Objects, and find it to be the best of the bunch. Layers are best for outlining. Smart Objects are best for illustration. Smart Objects are best for assuring that objects do not flatten out, as may happen if part of a Smart Object is flattened to a layer. Smart Objects will also let us move and resize objects without losing their orientation as they might if put into a group. There are many things you can do to make a photo better, even if it's not your best work. You can learn to "shoot what you see," and let the computer do the rest. You can do things like create panoramas, convert RAW to JPEG, and have your computer tweak colors. You can zoom in and out, crop out unwanted stuff, and remove people. There is not a lot of content noise in this review. The content noise is from people who know what they are talking about. In the Layer Styles window you can add lens distortion, sepia, and grain filters, as well as an all-new Lens Correction, New Layer, and New Merge functions. You can now merge multiple images into one layer or layer group with the New Merge function.
